

SIMPLICITY IN DRESS HELPS CONSERVATION

With a general textile upheaval, caused by the war, the matter of dress becomes not only an interesting but also a serious matter. In a lecture given Farmers' Week by Miss Amy L. Rolfe the necessity for a large supply of wool, cotton, linen and silk for Government use was explained.

With 15,000,000 fewer sheep raised in the United States now than in 1903 a More-Sheep-More-Wool association has been organized to devise measures to relieve the situation. The small amount of raw wool on the market has been commandeered by the Government for army and navy uniforms and blankets. Millions of yards of worsted cloth, costing $3 a yard and known as shalloon and shell cloth, is being used in bagging or covering both the propelling and explosive charges for the large guns.

The cotton situation is almost as serious as the wool, although the United States grows more than half the cotton in the world. This is not surprising when it is known that a bale of cotton is needed to fire one of the large guns, vast quantities are used for the unbleached muslin and gauze used in Red Cross work and a still greater amount is used for khaki uniforms and tents. The use of linen is still more impossible, since many thousands of yards are needed for airplane wings. Linen is the most satisfactory for this purpose because of its strength. Much of the flax of the world has been grown around the German border and in Belgium. This has been trampled down by the armies. There is practically no flax grown for the fibre in the United States, so linen as a dress material will not be extensively used.

Most of the silk comes from China and Japan. This material is so far little used for war supplies. Balloon cases are made from silk, and if the fibre proves to be gas restricting, as experiments will tell, most of the underwear for the soldiers in the trenches will be made of silk.

As wool, cotton, silk and linen comprise the list of fibres which are commonly used for clothing it will be necessary for the people of the United States to conserve the supply for textiles. The manufacturers will help by using as little material as possible in their ready-to-wear garments, but it is up to the women to do their part.

The entire dress wardrobe should be planned with an attempt to use the materials which are in the least demand for war appliances and uniforms. The official conservation uniform is a home work dress which is being adopted by women all over the country. It is made of washable goods, is loose and without useless ornamentation.

For the school girl the same principles hold. Her clothing should be extremely plain and simple with the smartness given by the crisp white collars and cuffs of pique or linen. Gingham and cotton poplins are most suitable materials for spring and fall wear, with the durable serge for colder months.

SPORT

Missouri's first invasion of Jayhawk land in the 1918 season will come on Monday when the Tiger basketball team, accompanied by Athletic Director W. E. Meanwell, arrives in Lawrence for a two game series with the Kansas five. Reports from Kansas are to the effect that the men on the hill are not fearing the Tiger quintet this season but Missouri, with the same average in game won and lost as the Kansas have made, feels more confident.

"We consider the Jayhawk five our hardest opponents this year," said Dr. Meanwell today, "but with a group of good men, some of them old on the Tiger team we feel that there should be a good chance for the Tigers to stay somewhere near first position, at least."

Kansas has five old men, Fearing, forward, Fink, center, Laslett, running guard, Neilson, guard, and Uhrlaub, captain and forward. All have had good experience on the team. Missouri will be represented by a squad composed of Ruby and Shirkey, forwards, Campbell, center, Slusher and Wackher, guards.

On comparative scores, Kansas must be given the edge, both teams in the Drake series having defeated that school, but at the same time Missouri failing to show up in the same class with the Jayhawkers. Kansas defeated Drake 64-24 while one Missouri score was only 19-17.

Kansas Wins One, Aggies the Other.

The University of Kansas and the Kansas Aggies broke even in two games of basketball played yesterday afternoon and the day before. The first game was won by the Aggies by the score of 36 to 23. They showed a burst of speed from start to finish and were never bested in score or playing. In the second game the Kansas team showed a complete reversal of form and nosed out the Aggies by the score of 35 to 32. The two teams ran neck and neck until the last few minutes of play.

SHIPPING MEN TO LONDON

Freight From America Will Be Apportioned to Allies.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Raymond B. Stevens, vice-chairman of the shipping board, and George Rubles of the board's legal staff, are to be sent to London as personal representatives of the shipping board.

The two American representatives probably will sit with the Inter-Allied Chartering Commission, although that has not been definitely decided. They will assist in apportioning among the Allies all the shipping America can spare for foreign service, and will keep the Allies informed as to the American shipping situation. England has had a shipping commissioner in the United States almost from the time America entered the war.
